The spectacular gardens, anchored by the butterfly bushes from the Paine Garden, have been home to the litany of community initiatives to renovate a demonstration garden of their traditional foods and medicinal plants, as a gift to their adopted countries. Visitors to the gardens are encouraged to touch and learn about the plants at their own pace, to admire the clump of soft flowers and maples that line the fence, and to note that these plants are far from bare and barren. While perusing the 200+ species in 2014 we found a handful of purple leafed maple, hypericum, and yarrow, and a spot where the flowers were the most vibrant. The prairie of the gardens is a step into the past, a way to see what was lost and how it can be renewed. The prairie is a step into the present, a way to imagine a garden that is as fresh as it is new. The prairie is a step into the future, a way to realize that whatever the climate, or whatever the season, a garden can be a gift to the land and to the community. The spectacular gardens, anchored by the butterfly bushes from the Paine Garden, have been home to the litany of community initiatives to renovate a demonstration garden of their traditional foods and medicinal plants, as a gift to their adopted countries. Visitors to the gardens are encouraged to touch and learn about the plants at their own pace, to admire the clump of soft flowers and maples that line the fence, and to note that these plants are far from bare and barren. While perusing the 200+ species in 2014 we found a handful of purple leafed maple, hypericum, and yarrow, and a spot where the flowers were the most vibrant. The prairie of the gardens is a step into the past, a way to see what was lost and how it can be renewed. The prairie is a step into the present, a way to imagine a garden that is as fresh as it is new. The prairie is a step into the future, a way to realize that whatever the climate, or whatever the season, a garden can be a gift to the land and to the community.

Woodland Wonder

Our natural area management plan, which describes the ecological values of each of the four zones, is designed to protect the prairie, while allowing native trees and shrubs to grow. The woodland is a natural space, a place where people garden, or otherwise, but they understand that it is a place where they are not in control. Our natural area management plan, which describes the ecological values of each of the four zones, is designed to protect the prairie, while allowing native trees and shrubs to grow. The woodland is a natural space, a place where people garden, or otherwise, but they understand that it is a place where they are not in control.

Meaningful Fitness

We invite you to sample rather than to harvest the fruits of our sweat. The trees and shrubs of our woodland are meant to be enjoyed, to learn about the ways the woods are managed, and to discover what they are doing for you, to play, or to play, and to learn about the trees and shrubs that you share the woods with. We invite you to sample rather than to harvest the fruits of our sweat. The trees and shrubs of our woodland are meant to be enjoyed, to learn about the ways the woods are managed, and to discover what they are doing for you, to play, or to play, and to learn about the trees and shrubs that you share the woods with.

Meaningful Fitness

The woodland is a place to learn, a place to read, a place to create your own personal project. You can find yourself in the woodland, alone, or with others, and learn about the way the trees and shrubs are managed. The woodland is a place to learn, a place to read, a place to create your own personal project. You can find yourself in the woodland, alone, or with others, and learn about the way the trees and shrubs are managed.

Architects and Gardeners on Community GroundWorks

The spectacular gardens, anchored by the butterfly bushes from the Paine Garden, have been home to the litany of community initiatives to renovate a demonstration garden of their traditional foods and medicinal plants, as a gift to their adopted countries. Visitors to the gardens are encouraged to touch and learn about the plants at their own pace, to admire the clump of soft flowers and maples that line the fence, and to note that these plants are far from bare and barren. While perusing the 200+ species in 2014 we found a handful of purple leafed maple, hypericum, and yarrow, and a spot where the flowers were the most vibrant. The prairie of the gardens is a step into the past, a way to see what was lost and how it can be renewed. The prairie is a step into the present, a way to imagine a garden that is as fresh as it is new. The prairie is a step into the future, a way to realize that whatever the climate, or whatever the season, a garden can be a gift to the land and to the community. The spectacular gardens, anchored by the butterfly bushes from the Paine Garden, have been home to the litany of community initiatives to renovate a demonstration garden of their traditional foods and medicinal plants, as a gift to their adopted countries. Visitors to the gardens are encouraged to touch and learn about the plants at their own pace, to admire the clump of soft flowers and maples that line the fence, and to note that these plants are far from bare and barren. While perusing the 200+ species in 2014 we found a handful of purple leafed maple, hypericum, and yarrow, and a spot where the flowers were the most vibrant. The prairie of the gardens is a step into the past, a way to see what was lost and how it can be renewed. The prairie is a step into the present, a way to imagine a garden that is as fresh as it is new. The prairie is a step into the future, a way to realize that whatever the climate, or whatever the season, a garden can be a gift to the land and to the community. The spectacular gardens, anchored by the butterfly bushes from the Paine Garden, have been home to the litany of community initiatives to renovate a demonstration garden of their traditional foods and medicinal plants, as a gift to their adopted countries. Visitors to the gardens are encouraged to touch and learn about the plants at their own pace, to admire the clump of soft flowers and maples that line the fence, and to note that these plants are far from bare and barren. While perusing the 200+ species in 2014 we found a handful of purple leafed maple, hypericum, and yarrow, and a spot where the flowers were the most vibrant. The prairie of the gardens is a step into the past, a way to see what was lost and how it can be renewed. The prairie is a step into the present, a way to imagine a garden that is as fresh as it is new. The prairie is a step into the future, a way to realize that whatever the climate, or whatever the season, a garden can be a gift to the land and to the community.
The Solvin Memorial Trail

A Shared Community Resource

Growing Our Own

We believe that growing our own food is essential to becoming part of the solution to the problems of the world. We do this by growing as much of our food as possible, and sharing the bounty with our neighbors. Our gardeners use organic methods to grow their produce, and we strive to make our garden as sustainable as possible.

Pomperamently Affoable Homes

The Madison Area Apartment Association (MAAA) is a member-supported nonprofit organization that serves Madison residents and property owners. The MAAA provides a variety of services, including educational programs, a newsletter, and a website.

Steel Rails

Beneath our feet you’ll find tracks laid in 1860. This mileage-long rail line was part of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha line that ran along this corridor. The tracks were removed in 1970, and the land was turned into a park.

Hand-Scale Urban Agriculture

What to see beyond the farm. Troy Community Farm is a 26-acre organic farm located in the city of Troy, New York. The farm is part of the Troy Community and is open to the public.

The Old Field

What to see beyond the farm. Troy Community Farm is a 26-acre organic farm located in the city of Troy, New York. The farm is part of the Troy Community and is open to the public.

Saw Grass

We are committed to protecting the environment and promoting sustainable practices. This includes reducing our carbon footprint, conserving natural resources, and promoting biodiversity. We work with local organizations to promote these goals, and we strive to be good stewards of our land.

Wild Highway

This is the northern border of Troy Prairie, and it’s a great place to begin your journey. The trail is paved with gravel and is wide enough for two people to walk side by side. It’s a great place to see wildflowers and other native plants.

As you walk north, you’ll notice the beautiful blue sky and the rolling hills of the landscape. The trail is well-marked with signs and is easy to follow.

A Shared Community Resource

The Madison Area Apartment Association (MAAA) is a member-supported nonprofit organization that serves Madison residents and property owners. The MAAA provides a variety of services, including educational programs, a newsletter, and a website.

Steel Rails

Beneath our feet you’ll find tracks laid in 1860. This mileage-long rail line was part of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha line that ran along this corridor. The tracks were removed in 1970, and the land was turned into a park.

Hand-Scale Urban Agriculture

What to see beyond the farm. Troy Community Farm is a 26-acre organic farm located in the city of Troy, New York. The farm is part of the Troy Community and is open to the public.

The Old Field

What to see beyond the farm. Troy Community Farm is a 26-acre organic farm located in the city of Troy, New York. The farm is part of the Troy Community and is open to the public.

Saw Grass

We are committed to protecting the environment and promoting sustainable practices. This includes reducing our carbon footprint, conserving natural resources, and promoting biodiversity. We work with local organizations to promote these goals, and we strive to be good stewards of our land.

Wild Highway

This is the northern border of Troy Prairie, and it’s a great place to begin your journey. The trail is paved with gravel and is wide enough for two people to walk side by side. It’s a great place to see wildflowers and other native plants.

As you walk north, you’ll notice the beautiful blue sky and the rolling hills of the landscape. The trail is well-marked with signs and is easy to follow.

A Shared Community Resource

The Madison Area Apartment Association (MAAA) is a member-supported nonprofit organization that serves Madison residents and property owners. The MAAA provides a variety of services, including educational programs, a newsletter, and a website.

Steel Rails

Beneath our feet you’ll find tracks laid in 1860. This mileage-long rail line was part of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha line that ran along this corridor. The tracks were removed in 1970, and the land was turned into a park.

Hand-Scale Urban Agriculture

What to see beyond the farm. Troy Community Farm is a 26-acre organic farm located in the city of Troy, New York. The farm is part of the Troy Community and is open to the public.

The Old Field

What to see beyond the farm. Troy Community Farm is a 26-acre organic farm located in the city of Troy, New York. The farm is part of the Troy Community and is open to the public.

Saw Grass

We are committed to protecting the environment and promoting sustainable practices. This includes reducing our carbon footprint, conserving natural resources, and promoting biodiversity. We work with local organizations to promote these goals, and we strive to be good stewards of our land.

Wild Highway

This is the northern border of Troy Prairie, and it’s a great place to begin your journey. The trail is paved with gravel and is wide enough for two people to walk side by side. It’s a great place to see wildflowers and other native plants.

As you walk north, you’ll notice the beautiful blue sky and the rolling hills of the landscape. The trail is well-marked with signs and is easy to follow.

A Shared Community Resource

The Madison Area Apartment Association (MAAA) is a member-supported nonprofit organization that serves Madison residents and property owners. The MAAA provides a variety of services, including educational programs, a newsletter, and a website.

Steel Rails

Beneath our feet you’ll find tracks laid in 1860. This mileage-long rail line was part of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha line that ran along this corridor. The tracks were removed in 1970, and the land was turned into a park.

Hand-Scale Urban Agriculture

What to see beyond the farm. Troy Community Farm is a 26-acre organic farm located in the city of Troy, New York. The farm is part of the Troy Community and is open to the public.

The Old Field

What to see beyond the farm. Troy Community Farm is a 26-acre organic farm located in the city of Troy, New York. The farm is part of the Troy Community and is open to the public.

Saw Grass

We are committed to protecting the environment and promoting sustainable practices. This includes reducing our carbon footprint, conserving natural resources, and promoting biodiversity. We work with local organizations to promote these goals, and we strive to be good stewards of our land.

Wild Highway

This is the northern border of Troy Prairie, and it’s a great place to begin your journey. The trail is paved with gravel and is wide enough for two people to walk side by side. It’s a great place to see wildflowers and other native plants.

As you walk north, you’ll notice the beautiful blue sky and the rolling hills of the landscape. The trail is well-marked with signs and is easy to follow.

A Shared Community Resource

The Madison Area Apartment Association (MAAA) is a member-supported nonprofit organization that serves Madison residents and property owners. The MAAA provides a variety of services, including educational programs, a newsletter, and a website.

Steel Rails

Beneath our feet you’ll find tracks laid in 1860. This mileage-long rail line was part of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha line that ran along this corridor. The tracks were removed in 1970, and the land was turned into a park.

Hand-Scale Urban Agriculture

What to see beyond the farm. Troy Community Farm is a 26-acre organic farm located in the city of Troy, New York. The farm is part of the Troy Community and is open to the public.

The Old Field

What to see beyond the farm. Troy Community Farm is a 26-acre organic farm located in the city of Troy, New York. The farm is part of the Troy Community and is open to the public.

Saw Grass

We are committed to protecting the environment and promoting sustainable practices. This includes reducing our carbon footprint, conserving natural resources, and promoting biodiversity. We work with local organizations to promote these goals, and we strive to be good stewards of our land.

Wild Highway

This is the northern border of Troy Prairie, and it’s a great place to begin your journey. The trail is paved with gravel and is wide enough for two people to walk side by side. It’s a great place to see wildflowers and other native plants.

As you walk north, you’ll notice the beautiful blue sky and the rolling hills of the landscape. The trail is well-marked with signs and is easy to follow.

A Shared Community Resource

The Madison Area Apartment Association (MAAA) is a member-supported nonprofit organization that serves Madison residents and property owners. The MAAA provides a variety of services, including educational programs, a newsletter, and a website.

Steel Rails

Beneath our feet you’ll find tracks laid in 1860. This mileage-long rail line was part of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha line that ran along this corridor. The tracks were removed in 1970, and the land was turned into a park.

Hand-Scale Urban Agriculture

What to see beyond the farm. Troy Community Farm is a 26-acre organic farm located in the city of Troy, New York. The farm is part of the Troy Community and is open to the public.

The Old Field

What to see beyond the farm. Troy Community Farm is a 26-acre organic farm located in the city of Troy, New York. The farm is part of the Troy Community and is open to the public.

Saw Grass

We are committed to protecting the environment and promoting sustainable practices. This includes reducing our carbon footprint, conserving natural resources, and promoting biodiversity. We work with local organizations to promote these goals, and we strive to be good stewards of our land.

Wild Highway

This is the northern border of Troy Prairie, and it’s a great place to begin your journey. The trail is paved with gravel and is wide enough for two people to walk side by side. It’s a great place to see wildflowers and other native plants.

As you walk north, you’ll notice the beautiful blue sky and the rolling hills of the landscape. The trail is well-marked with signs and is easy to follow.